Technical Bulletin No. 4

January 10, 2002

Issue: The distribution of preliminary electric designs by ENMAX to the other shallow utility companies.

Background information: Currently, ENMAX Energy develops the preliminary electric design after receiving the subdivision plan from the Developer. The preliminary design is forwarded to the Developer's Consultant for review. The Consultant identifies any changes required and returns the preliminary design to ENMAX Energy, and the Consultant sends copies of the preliminary design with any changes to TELUS, SHAW and ATCO Gas. ENMAX Energy then prepares the final design and upon receiving approval from the Consultant, ENMAX Energy sends copies of the final design to the other shallow utilities.

Resolution: ENMAX Energy has agreed to send copies of the electric preliminary designs directly to the other shallow utilities at the same time they are first sent to the Developer's Consultants, thereby no longer requiring that the Consultant send copies of the preliminary design to the other utilities.

Other information: This will allow the other shallow utilities additional time to work on their design plans with the understanding that changes/revisions may be necessary. This should reduce the amount of time required for the designs to be finalized.
